Jazz musicians have always gathered. That's how the DNA of the music is passed on from generation to generation. For all the wonders of 21st century technology, and all the trappings of formal education, as jazz musicians we are, first and foremost, part of an oral history, an unbroken chain of wisdom (and wit) that stretches back into the mists of music history - to the streets of New Orleans and the dance clubs of Chicago, to the late night jam sessions of Harlem and the quayside bars of Havana and Rio, to the lofts of downtown Manhattan and underground outposts in Berlin, Paris and Dublin.

The chinese whispers of jazz go all the way back to the founders of the music, so when we meet and play with other musicians, when we learn an old tune with new friends, when some elder statesman shows us a new trick, we are connecting with that continuum in a way that, for the most part, classical musicians and rock musicians cannot. Styles may come and go, sounds may change, and we may have moved far away from anything that might be recognisable to Lester Young or Charlie Parker as jazz, but we are, nonetheless, inheritors of the same living tradition. When we sit in a class with a great teacher, when we get up and jam with musicians we have never met before, even when we are just giving our energy to performers as members of an audience, we are connecting with a way of making music that is alive and growing - to quote Gustav Mahler, tradition is not the worship of ashes, it's the preservation of a flame. Eddie Lee and his fantastic team breathe on that flame every year, and it's a real privilege for us all - musicians and listeners, students and teachers, old hands and beginners - to bask in its light.

Sligo Jazz Project (SJP) summer school has firmly established itself as Europe's biggest and best jazz education event. This year we have a huge faculty of twenty-three international musicians giving workshops each day in IT Sligo and performing in concert and jam sessions. You'd never know who might turn up at sessions at Hargadons, Tricky's, various Sligo cafés or our festival hub, the Riverside Hotel, during the week.

This year's theme is Fusion, highlighting the plethora of musical styles that make up the jazz planet. Our Artist-in-Residence, UK saxophonist/rapper Soweto Kinch's swaggering Bebop/Freestyle Rap/Hip-Hop mix and LA-based Aussie drummer Virgil Donati's jazz-metal fusion add a lot of spice to the more conventional jazz flavours you'll sample this week.

Fabulous female jazz performers abound, with vocal jazz from Liane Carroll, Sara Colman and Emilia Martensson, who are joined for the first time in Sligo by trombonist Shannon Barnett and saxophonist Meilana Gillard. As always with SJP, there are many firsts! So, for the first time, we team up with the Yeats Summer School and the Hawk's Well Theatre in co-presenting a night of Yeats-inspired jazz, featuring vocalist Christine Tobin's Sailing to Byzantium. We'll have the SJP All Stars on Friday this year and two action-packed shows of Kieran Quinn's Themed Night Shows (Theme number 18). What's not to like?

Sligo Jazz Project, Hawk's Well Theatre and the Yeats International Summer School join to present a celebration of W. B. Yeats in words and music from Christine Tobin, Irish singer-songwriter, composer and award winning jazz vocalist.

Sailing To Byzantium is a collection beautiful settings of 12 poems by W.B Yeats. Christine won a 2012 British Composer Award for this work and the album received many 5 star reviews. She works with the poems on a deep intuitive level creating music that draws you into a world of unalloyed soulfulness, conjuring watercolour accompaniments on The Fisherman and a hypnotic, prayer-like refrain on Sailing To Byzantium. The broad palette of harmony and colour throughout draws on influences from folk, jazz and twentieth century classical, from Miles to Messiaen.

"In this beautiful collection of songs based on the poetry of WB Yeats, vocalist Christine Tobin has created an unqualified masterpiece....(she) perfectly gauges the emotional and spiritual resonances of the texts, aided by performances of incredible subtlety and understatement." Jazzwise ****

2017 RESIDENCIES

SJP is delighted to present two residencies this year.

Soweto Kinch

Award-winning UK saxophonist/freestyle rapper/composer, Soweto Kinch is our Artist in Residence for 2017. The man who brought us "Jazz Planet" will present an eclectic and electric mix of Bebop and Hip-Hop that stretches jazz's boundaries and challenge our perception of musical genres.

Francesco Turrisi

Wicklow-based Italian multi-instrumentalist Francesco Turrisi is equally at home with early music as he is with Balkan, Eastern European folk and modern jazz, exemplified by his list of recent collaborations: Bobby McFerrin, Yurodny, L'Arpeggiata, Dave Liebman and Wolfgang Muthspiel to name but a few. This week Francesco performs with an accordion trio, an electric quartet, an acoustic group and is the pianist in Christine Tobin's Sailing to Byzantium show.

FRIDAY 28 JULY

Soweto Kinch

Soweto Kinch, saxophone & voice, with David Lyttle, drums
& John Goldsby, bass

Sligo Jazz Artist-in-Residence 2017, Soweto Kinch has amassed an unprecedented array of accolades including a nomination for the much-coveted Mercury Award and two MOBO awards. His Sligo residency comes at the tail end of his Nonagram album tour, his live shows always delight and surprise. Kinch's swaggering Bebop/Freestyle Rap/Hip-Hop mix adds a lot of spice to the more conventional jazz flavours you'll sample this week. He now hosts his very own weekly BBC radio show 'Jazz Planet'. Expect scalding hot hard bop jazz/hip-hop grooves spliced with free flowing fiery lyrics of the likes you've never heard before!

SATURDAY 29 JULY

Virgil Donati's Fusion Jam

Virgil Donati, drums, with Anton Davidyants, electric bass, Steve Hamilton, keyboards and special guest Mike Walker, guitar, Mike Nielsen, guitar

Virgil Donati's astonishing drum performances have prompted collaborations with a huge range of world-renowned artists and he continues to push the limits of the instrument to astonishing new levels. Tonight he showcases his own music and pays tribute to his friend Allan Holdsworth, the unique British guitarist and musical collaborator of Donati's, who passed away earlier this year. The incredibly prolific Russian bassist Anton Davidyants has taken the internet by storm with his virtuosic performances. Keyboardist Steve Hamilton is a regular with Billy Cobham's band and guitarist Mike Walker's dreamy playing will be familiar to anyone who came to see his band the Impossible Gentlemen at the last two Sligo Jazz Festival events. Our own Mike Nielsen adds a Sligo element to this exciting lineup.
